

Abstract of the Disclosure

Animal products are processed through multiple successive immersions in sanitizing solutions at different successive temperatures within controlled environments including at fluid pressures different from ambient pressure to reduce resident microbial contaminants in preparation for packaging within encapsulating material prior to retail distribution.